Lifestyle Medicine

- ✔ Lifestyle medicine focuses on managing lifestyle-related health problems to prevent and reverse common chronic physical and mental health illnesses. Critically investigate and assess lifestyle-related disease, including diverse models of care. Learn to apply theories in psychological, medical, nutritional and addiction science in a variety of health contexts.
- ✔ Choose from electives in research, public health, business and health professional education to align with your career goals. Complete your studies with a capstone project, where you will apply your understanding of lifestyle medicine to an industry-related issue.
- ✔ Students who complete a JCU Lifestyle Medicine degree will be eligible to apply for a Fellowship of the Australasian Society of Lifestyle Medicine.

“How we live heals or harms us. Fifty per cent of Australians have a chronic disease and depression is now the leading cause of morbidity. Yet we know lifestyle interventions can prevent around 80 per cent of chronic disease.

Lifestyle Medicine is the formal evidence-based application of nutrition, fasting, movement, sleep, mind states and mindsets, reduced substance use, social connectedness, connection with the natural world and social determinants, combined with enhanced behaviour change and health coaching, new models of care and technology to prevent and treat disease and lead to whole-of-person wellbeing.”

Dr Sam Manger

LIFESTYLE MEDICINE COURSE COORDINATOR

“It is wonderful to see lifestyle medicine gaining the attention it deserves amongst medical and allied health professionals. I have worked for many years with Dr Manger as part of our Australasian Society of Lifestyle Medicine events and conferences, and he leads the field with knowledge, passion and enthusiasm. Having the opportunity to undertake a course led by him is undoubtedly a fantastic opportunity and you can be assured of quality, evidence-based teaching.”

Career Opportunities

There is an increasingly high demand for lifestyle and public health expertise in almost all health care industries, including primary care and tertiary hospital settings, community projects, industry, not-for-profit and government sectors.

The Lifestyle Medicine courses are suited to all health professionals, including but not limited to doctors, dietitians, physiotherapists, exercise physiologists, sports and exercise scientists, nurses, psychologists, pharmacists, nurses, podiatrists and more.

Graduates of JCU's Graduate Certificate, Graduate Diploma and Master of Lifestyle Medicine will have the skills to consult and lead clinical and research programs in a variety of health care settings.

This course provides qualifications to support careers in clinical practice, public health, research, teaching, consultation for health care systems, occupational programs, industry and community programs.

“Studying lifestyle medicine at JCU is an incubator for exciting careers, projects and innovation in health care. There is rapidly growing evidence and demand for lifestyle medicine, whole of person care and whole of community care from the public, clinicians, researchers and industry.”
