Ready today for tomorrow

By studying the JCU Master of Business Administration – Master of Conflict Management and Resolution, you are equipping yourself with enhanced knowledge and skills in key areas that will distinguish you to future employers.

The Master of Conflict Management and Resolution course is academically grounded and practice oriented. Our students develop the knowledge and skills to analyse, manage and resolve conflict in a wide variety of contexts. Graduates are prepared to work in professions that deal directly with conflict as well as in other professions that require conflict management skills.

Through the MBA program students will have the opportunity to engage with a variety of topics and disciplines essential for managers, leaders and organisations today. Study areas include responsible management practices, financial skills, technology and innovation, globalisation, career development, corporate governance, sustainability, risk and value creation, entrepreneurship and decision-making, knowledge economy, legislation, strategy, change and leadership.

The Master of Business Administration uses core knowledge from the academic disciplines of business, law, psychology, technology, social science and humanities to explore key areas confronting modern managers and organisations.

Through the MCMR program, students will learn how to:

- Synthesise complex conflict and related theories and standards for professional practice in conflict management and resolution.
- Critically analyse complex conflicts and conflict management systems.
- Provide specialised advice to assist individuals, groups and organisations to constructively manage conflict.
- Effectively and ethically communicate with, facilitate and support people in personal, group, organisational and cross-cultural conflict.
- Independently and critically reflect on and assess their own capabilities and performance, and make use of feedback as appropriate, to support personal and professional development.

“The workshops I attended as part of the Master of Conflict Management and Resolution were a real highlight of my studies. The combination of case studies, practical exercises and theory helped increase my understanding of the content and gave me skills I could take back to my workplace the very next day. I also really enjoyed the networking opportunities these workshops offered, connecting me with people across industry. The program significantly enhanced my leadership skills.”

Natasha Buttler

MASTER OF BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION - MASTER OF CONFLICT MANAGEMENT AND RESOLUTION

“I love working with passionate and committed students who are seeking to further their knowledge, experience and skills. It is rewarding for me when students share how they have applied their new understanding to conflict situations at work, with their families or communities, and the positive outcomes that have resulted from their increased awareness and ability to engage and communicate effectively.”

Claire Holland

SENIOR LECTURER AND MCMR PROGRAM DIRECTOR

Career Opportunities

Joint degrees provide postgraduate students an opportunity to develop expertise in two complimentary disciplines and enhance career prospects whilst reducing the time to complete two Masters degrees. The joint degree is designed for students seeking to deepen their understanding of business administration and management, whilst also acquiring theoretical knowledge and practical skills in conflict management and resolution.

Our students come from a wide variety of backgrounds, including management, health, local government, law, emergency services, education, Defence and social work.

Many of our graduates find that developing advanced conflict management and resolution skills helps their career progression in their current employment, particularly in management roles. Graduates have successfully applied their knowledge and skills in a wide range of professions and industries. These include health, local government, higher education, emergency services, primary and secondary schools, construction, logistics, law, Federal politics, Defence, social work and in general management settings; both in Australia and in other countries. Graduates can also practice as mediators, conciliators, arbitrators and ombuds in private practice or with corporate or government organisations.
